Harry's New Life

Hey Readers, thanks for clicking on my story and taking the time to read it.

Lets assume Dumbledore didn't place Harry with the Dursley's, and instead took him to a remote mansion, nowhere near any other living beings, way off the radar, with McGonagall and Snape (for some reason unknown to me... Hey i dont control my dreams!)

Lets also assume Night Fury's grow at the same rate as humans, so like, 3 years is still a toddler and stuff, but they live a lot longer than other dragons, so take longer to mature.

By the way, this is a Good Snape, McGonagall, and Voldemort story, but Sneakily Evil Dumbledore, So some role swapping.

Harry is 8 years old

Enjoy the story

Disclaimer: I do not own Harry Potter or anything from How To Train Your Dragon, Those belong to their respective owners.

Harry sighed, bored and not being able to sleep, so he got up from his bed and went outside ~Maybe a walk will help me sleep~ He thought to himself.

Out in the night air he sighed happily, he had always loved night time, he stared up at the stars and saw something moving in front of them and blocking the shining pinpricks of light.

He focused his eyes onto the moving speck and felt something within him stir, like it was awakening from a long nap, so he closed his eyes and delved deep within himself to find out what it was, like the curious 8 year old he was.

Harry then stood in-front of this giant ball of softly glowing green light, he stared at it for a moment or two, then wrenched his gaze away and looked around the space he was in.

He spotted two green eyes, staring at him after a few moments of searching, and curiously walked towards them, feeling no fear. Harry approched the eyes and began to see what they were connected to, a long slim lithe body with a swaying tail and four legs and a pair of pitch black wings, mostly covered with pure black scales.

Harry took all this in with excitement, he had read books and seen pictures and figured out this was a dragon, but it was really small and different from any dragon he had ever seen in any books, but he continued to approch anyway.

He looked at the dragon in amazement and stuck out his hand to pet it, but quickly moved it back when the young dragon growled slightly.

Harry looked at the dragon then turned away and extended his hand again, he had seen this in a book and wanted to try it now he could.

He felt a warmth on his hand, and looked back at the dragon who stared back into his eyes, Harry then felt the warmth spreading all over his body, then he blacked out.
